A landscape is a meeting. I said that I liked this landscape. But what is really? That's a landscape? The meeting enters the landscape at which I look and the one that I see takes place in a neutral, empty space. Neither the area (extent) in front of me, nor my movement ever seems to reduce the distance with this landscape. I believe that the mystery of the existence is in the nature of this horizon in the center of this constant landscape which haunts me.
